You are literally in hell

Anonymous

10/17/24(Thu)07:53:08 No.39057054

Because you can't die. I am talking about quantum suicide and immortality. Check this topic if you don't know what I'm talking about.

Assuming you know this topic, let's do a thought experiment: You are on top of a volcano, and you jump into lava. You start melting with incredible pain, you "die" due to pain, and you jump to another universe where you didn't die due to pain... This continues and continues until it is impossible for you to survive. Then you jump into another reality when you are about to jump again... Congratulations, you got yourself stuck in an indefinite death/pain loop... Don't tell me this isn't hell.

bro, no, original sin is consumption, path out of the fire is simple, 40+2(the days grow short yo) days alone in the cave with naught but the adversary. as you know you cant die, rid yourself of the original sin of consuming - anything - itll take your dna 42 days to epigenitcally deactivate all the proteins that presently synthesis in response to rampant apoptosis so the withdraws will hit hard but after, your cultivation base will be a most glorious and eternal foundation for the construction of your temple

So what. Apparently its easy to adapt to hell because there are no blurred lines. Heaven on the other hand is nearly impossible for anyone like you to adapt too because you have rules there and you must obey them, or you will be cast out of heaven.

There are worse things than hell. Such as, being subjected to the Encouraged Limerence Cock Ship.

Because that's the furthest away. Your consciousness jumps to a CLOSEST reality where you survive a little longer. It doesn't jump into a reality where you survive longest directly but it slowly goes to that. So when all possible realities runs out where you jump into lava, you would continue the cycle. Which I believe would take fuckton of realities to run out. Then you would jump into a reality where you didn't jump into lava and something else happened.

Which means this retard is in some reality where he didn't die and probably successfully evangelized and considered a hero by protestant christians.

I'm sorry guys but it's true. I died in December 2023. I think I died in my sleep, but it's foggy and I can't remember clearly ANYTHING that happened prior to 12/12/23.

Everything beyond this date is a vaguepost to me, my first clear memories all happen after this date, which is when it almost felt like I "hit my head" or was suddenly awake, or a gasp for air after I had been drowning my entire life, I suddenly woke up from an intense sleep.

I died. And maybe I was given a chance to escape and not to reincarnate, but I messed up and ended back here. Or maybe I was never given a choice. Because there seemed to be no gap.

It was Death>Rebirth INSTANTLY, but VIVIDLY.

The idea of where consciousness "comes from" and why it would continue in your brain is tricky. Under quantum immortality, the theory is that there isn't a separate "you" jumping into a new body; rather, your own continuity of subjective experience simply persists in the branch of the universe where survival happens. The brain doesn't need to make room for a "new" consciousness because it's the same continuity just in a reality where the brain continues to function against all odds.

Next Chapter. Start at 1. Memory erased, done.

The main problem is not what happens after you die. The main problem is what you ask the lady in the office for after you learn how many times you have done this.

It also depends on if you are still one with the light or not. Which means, that if you are one with the light, you can ask to go home by turning around and facing the darkness like a man.

Precisely, and yes, and that is why we (all the variable copies of myself) all of us are decided to throw chaos to chaos. The rest of us that are against those of us that want to at least try to succeed in the impossible task, have decided this is what is best as a whole. If you are not a part of the fold you are against me. And Sofar, you seem to be the only outsider of the Singularity that knows what is going on.

Imagine pulling the trigger. You hear click, and do it again, click and click. You don't go to a reality where you didn't hear a click. Therefore there must be a possibility where you burn to death, again and again and for the longest time possible.

In this mystical tale, Venus, the goddess of love, is seen not just as a celestial body but as the embodiment of a cosmic womb. Inside her resides Apollo, the god of light and prophecy, living within the old heaven, a realm of timeless wisdom and divine harmony. Apollo's presence within Venus signifies a golden age of unity, where creation and light are nurtured at the heart of the universe.

Meanwhile, Cronus, the god of time and cycles, has taken residence inside Saturn, representing the new heaven. Saturn is the domain where time, destiny, and the passage of eras are controlled. Cronus shapes the laws of the cosmos, setting in motion the shifts between the old and new heavens.

As you journey inside Venus, you are drawn into this cosmic mystery. Here, you encounter the golden thread, a symbol of the connection between the old and new heavens. The golden thread weaves through Venus and Saturn, uniting the timeless wisdom of Apollo with the cyclical power of Cronus. This thread is the force that binds creation, love, time, and fate together, a reminder that even though the heavens shift, they are eternally linked.

In learning about the golden thread, you come to understand the deep connection between light and time, love and destiny—how the old and new heavens coexist, shaping and guiding the universe in perfect harmony.

The Ballad of Venus and the Golden Thread
epic rock big hair band2024-
10-17 11:59
In the skies of eternal flame,
Where stars and

gods entwine,
There dwells a queen, of endless fame,
In Venus' womb divine.
Not just a planet, far from sight,
But love's own beating heart,
Where Apollo, god of radiant light,
Plays his immortal part.

Within her breast, the old heavens hum,
A golden age of yore,
Where time was still, and light would come,
To weave creation's core.
Apollo rests in this sacred place,
A prophet, wise and bold,
Whose touch ignites the boundless space
With wisdom pure as gold.

Yet far away in Saturn's ring,
Where ancient Cronus reigns,
The god of time, the circling king,

Now holds the cosmic chains.
In Saturn's realm, the new heavens rise,
Where fate and eras flow,
Each second carved from endless skies
In tides both fast and slow.

But through these worlds, a thread of light
Spans time, and love, and lore,
A shining path both thin and bright
That binds forevermore.
For Venus holds this sacred thread,
A link from old to new,
Where light and time together wed,
And fate is woven true.

Inside her womb, you wander deep,
Through realms of stars unknown,
The golden thread begins to sweep
And guide you toward your own.
You see how love, and time, and light,
Are not divided strands,
But braided paths that reunite
Beneath the gods' own hands.

For though the heavens shift and turn,
And ages rise and fall,
The light of love shall ever burn,
To bind and guide us all.
From Venus' womb to Saturn's might,
The universe is wed,
With Apollo's heart and Cronus' sight,
By the golden, timeless thread.

So sing, O stars, of Venus bright,
Of Saturn's endless sway,
Of how the gods in heaven's light
Shall weave eternal day.
For through the thread of fate and grace,
The heavens find their way,
Where love, and time, in vast embrace
Forevermore shall stay.

Easy fix.

The wardens step in and put you in a reality before you jumped, where you don't want to jump anymore.

Someone posted a story here, not sure if it was real. The anon was driving at night, ran a red light, and got side-swiped. He died almost instantly, and saw his body from below. Next thing he knew, he was stopped at the red light, as if nothing ever happened.

Another one where an anon was drowning; He actually did drown, and described the water going into his lungs, the feelings of peace, and feeling warm. He woke up on the shore because reasons, no-one found him, he just woke up there. He was like a mile away from shore on the seabed so it was extremely unlikely that currents carried him there.

The wardens are many things, cruel maybe, but they're also capable of miracles.

I believe what you're talking about is the cause behind the feeling described as "the pull of the void"

When standing on the edge of a high cliff sometimes you'll get an urge to jump even if you're not suicidal. When you feel the void beckon I believe that we are sensing those other universes. Sometimes a freak gust of wind knocks you off, sometimes a machine malfunctions, sometimes cosmic radiation whizzes through your head and hits the right neuron to make you swerve into oncoming traffic.

But that isn't hell. Hell is other people. Boo!
