>using an article from 5 months ago

What, your claim is that they removed Russia's firepower and air power advantage in the last five months? It's gotten worse if anything since we're now getting all the MSM articles about NATO's supply issues.

>Which they are getting

They still don't have Western armor and probably won't get it for months.

>Because Russia doesn't have the capabilities for anything else anymore.

According to who? Russia's daily artillery shell consumption was about 36,000 as of a few weeks ago, while Ukraine's was 6,000. And if they're using human wave tactics, then why did they only mobilize 300,000 reservists while Ukraine's banned every male from leaving and is grabbing randos off the streets? There's no internal logic.

Wagner's CEO thanked Russia for reaching regular supply today. What was that, three to four days of those complaints before they stopped? That's supposed to make up for a year of firepower deficiency? Every argument for Ukraine relies on taking a microscope to individual Ukrainian successes or Russian issues while ignoring everything else. Hell, >>417395605 is a perfect example. He agrees in this post that Ukraine regularly gets BTFO'd in artillery but thinks that posting a single soldier's death negates that.

Google translate lyrics:

The arrows are spinning faster and faster, the stars have become older for a year, the Leaf fell off the calendar, but you should not be sad in vain.
And it is not in vain that all friends gather on their birthday,
And the more friends around, the younger the beat of the heart.

Happy birthday, success, joy, luck,
Any desires of fulfillment and a million nights and days!
Happy birthday, love to dizziness,
And crazy mood and the most devoted friends!

Telegrams fly out the window, even if sometimes you are not always lucky,
Do not be sad and do not regret, there will be many bright days.
With candles on cake and champagne to the ceiling,
How long the will circle - we will be so much, we will live.

Happy birthday, success, joy, luck,
Any desires of fulfillment and a million nights and days!
Happy birthday, love to dizziness,
And crazy mood and the most devoted friends!

Happy birthday, success, joy, luck,
Any desires of fulfillment and a million nights and days!
Happy birthday, love to dizziness,
And crazy mood and the most devoted friends!

&gt;What, your claim is that they removed Russia's firepower and air power advantage in the last five months?

Are you saying that nothing has changed in the last 5 months?

Russia was pushed away from Kharkiv and out of Kherson since that article.

&gt;It's gotten worse if anything

lol

&gt;we're now getting all the MSM articles about NATO's supply issues.

We're getting articles about them upping production to meet Ukraine's needs.

&gt;They still don't have Western armor and probably won't get it for months.

They have Bradleys by now.

&gt;According to who?

"UK Defense Secretary Ben Wallace told the BBC that the UK had not seen the Russian "massing of a single force to punch through in a big offensive" and noted that Russians are now trying to advance in Donbas at a high cost." [1] Wallace estimated that Russia could have committed up to 97 percent of its army to the Ukraine and that its combat effectiveness has decreased by 40 percent due to an "almost First World War level of attrition" that measures Russian advances in meters in human wave attacks. ISW did not independently confirm Wallace's estimates, but his observation that Russia lacks sufficient mechanized combat power for a breakthrough aligns with previous ISW assessments that the conventional Russian military must undergo significant reconstitution before regaining the ability to conduct effective maneuver warfare. [2] Wallace's observations also suggest that Russia does not have untapped combat-ready reserves capable of executing a large-scale offensive, which is also ISW's assessment."

 >Russia's daily artillery shell consumption was about 36,000 as of a few weeks ago
 Down from 60k
 And it's not 36k, it's 20k.
 >then why did they only mobilize 300,000 reservists
 "only"
 They also got a massive amount of prisoners.
 >There's no internal logic there.
 Nothing you said is counter to any of my claims.

Translation:

prigozhin: i killed them from today's front?

contractor: yes today.

prigozhin: Well, yes, good luck, happy new year.

contractor: yes, they were mowed down by machine gunners. Our guys got them back here with some trucks.

prigozhin: everyone is working on New Years.

contractor: yevgeniy, who's in these bags?

prigozhin: fighters of the wagner unit, they died on the front. Their contract is over, they'll go home in a week.

>Are you saying that nothing has changed in the last 5 months?

What's changed in regards to the artillery and air disparity?

>Russia was pushed away from Kharkiv and out of Kherson since that article.

The article itself says that they did so with human waves, and the article I posted previously in the thread had a Ukian soldier complaining that they were down to light vehicles around Kharkov because they'd lost their armor. Does that sound like a healthy artillery/air advantage?

>We're getting articles about them upping production to meet Ukraine's needs.

The articles are literally titled "Ukraine is burning through ammo faster than NATO can produce it."

>They have Bradleys by now.

In Ukraine? No, they're still being trained.

>"UK Defense Secretary Ben Wallace

Kek, so Western glowies. How many lies do I have to post for them?

>Down from 60k

A drop's expected after a full year.

>And it's not 36k, it's 20k.

No it's not. Even if it was, what's the argument when Ukraine's expenditure is still way lower than 20k?

>"only"

Yeah, only. They only mobilized actual reservists with prior military experience, while Ukraine's snatching every guy it can. Do you have any arguments?

>What's changed in regards to the artillery

Russia using less and less of it.

>and air disparity?

You mean drones?

Russia has been using drones to target civilian infrastructure.

>The article itself says that they did so with human waves

No.

Kharkiv was far too quick to be done with human wave attacks, and Kherson was starving the Russians on the city side out.

>The articles are literally titled "Ukraine is burning through ammo faster than NATO can produce it."

Oh, right.

You're illiterate.

Well, call your helper and have them read out the rest of the title.

>In Ukraine? No, they're still being trained.

No.

>A first batch of M2 Bradley combat vehicles left the US for Ukraine, the US military announced Monday night. [the 30th of January]

>Kek, so Western glowies

Right, and here we have the eternal cope.

Just say you can't handle the truth, anon, clearly it triggers you so much.

>A drop's expected after a full year.

Because... they're running out.

>No it's not.

Yes it is.

>Even if it was, what's the argument when Ukraine's expenditure is still way lower than 20k?

That's called a pivot, anon.

>Yeah, only

That's not "only" you utter cretin.

They went in with around 180k, needing to pull in almost double that amount in mobilization obviously points towards it just not being "only".

>Do you have any arguments?

I have, so far you have failed to respond to literally any of them.

> Fucking kek. They human-waved until they exhausted Russian supplies, at which point Russia withdrew in good order. It was retarded that Ukraine even let Russia occupy all that territory north of the Dnieper in the first place.

Distilled cope. Injected into my cringe folder. It's funny you say this as Wagner literally admits they're taking hundreds of killed in action every single day. Every day. Imagine that that would mean they're taking thousands of KIA a WEEK. tens of thousands of KIA a MONTH. Not even mentioning wounded in action and yet in the last 7 months of fighting

Russias gained about 30 square kilometres

No, they didn't.

Literally nowhere does anyone say that.

They starved the Russians around Kherson out, as Surovkin said:

>He claimed the reasoning for this decision was that Kherson and nearby settlements were not able to be properly supplied and that civilians were in danger from Ukrainian shelling.

>What's changed in regards to the artillery

You conveniently cut out "disparity," kek. Russia's using less from its highs in the very opening of the war, but it's laughably obvious that you have no argument regarding the disparity.

>You mean drones?

Nope, retard-kun, I said "air." As in all air assets. On that topic, though, whatever happened to all those Bayraktars?

>Russia has been using drones to target civilian infrastructure.

So NATO's been conducting terror campaigns this whole time?

>No.

I already posted the article screencaps, and both articles were written by Western MSM and composed of interviews with Ukrainian soldiers. The Kherson one clearly stated that they attacked into an overwhelming firepower advantage and took heavy casualties for it, and the Kharkov one clearly stated that they suffered extreme vehicle losses and ended with them begging for Western vehicle replacements. Pic related is from that same article.

>Well, call your helper and have them read out the rest of the title.

What, the part where they "plan" to make up for the deficiency they just stated. You're trying hard to weasel out of points, but that doesn't fly here.

>No.

Show me the Bradleys in Ukraine, then. The last news we had was of Ukrainians being trained outside the country for vehicles like the Bradley and Stryker.

>Right, and here we have the eternal cope.

Western glowies haven't been right on wars in years. Afghanistan was downright laughable, and Russia was supposed to run out of the same missiles "targeting civilian infrastructure" months ago.

>Because... they're running out.

No, you put a lot in the prewar surplus and have to moderate more to maintain a steady supply.

>Yes it is.

Great argument?

>That's called cope, anon.

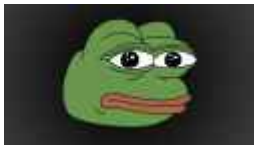

That's called cope. What's your argument for the shell expenditure disparity? State it in plain English.

>That's not how you utter cretin.

A nation of 14 million mobilizing 300,000 reservists? Yup, that's only. Cope

>You conveniently cut out "disparity," kek.

I didn't, actually.

>Russia's using less from its highs in the very opening of the war

And now, when they are trying to launch an assault they can't even produce anywhere near the same amount?

Wonder why that is.

>As in all air assets

Oh, you mean all those air assets Russia keeps wasting on civilian infrastructure?

>On that topic, though, whatever happened to all those Bayraktars?

Probably the same thing that happened to all of Russia's air power, it became too big a target for AA.

>So NATO's been conducting terror campaigns this whole time?

Can you do anything other than act like an NPC?

>The Kherson one clearly stated that they attacked into an overwhelming firepower advantage and took heavy casualties for it >and the Kharkov one clearly stated that they suffered extreme vehicle losses and ended with them begging for Western vehicle replacements.

Okay, I guess you just don't have any idea what a human wave attack is if you just think it means "heavy casualties"

Again, I know you're retarded but "suffered extreme vehicle losses" does also not mean "human wave" attack.

Wagner probably suffered 40k casualties from a pool of about 50k prisoners.

That's indicative of human wave attacks.

>You're trying hard to weasel out of points, but that doesn't fly here.

I didn't.

You're the one that cut that important piece of information out.

>The last news we had was of Ukrainians being trained outside the country for vehicles like the Bradley and Stryker.

No, the last news was the Bradleys being enroute to Ukraine.

>Western governments haven't been right on wars in years

Except they're correct in Russia invading, Russia's logistical failures, Russia trying to fake the whole "biolabs" thing.

You can come up with what you want, but they're correct.

>moderate to maintain a steady supply.

its been picking up quickly, ive been passively paying attention since the harry potter game. dont normally go on reddit for anything except 2 subs but randomly went on the front page to see how bad the social conditioning was and every thread in the top regardless of the sub was ripping hard on trannies because they went all over spoiling the harry potter game in every decent sized sub. openly telling them to fuck off and stop the hyperbole and trying to make everything about themselves, mods werent even trying to contain or stop it.

only thing i saw trying to defend them was a tranny pretending not to be one trying to say it wasnt trannies it was 4chan false flagging, people laughed at him.

the most fascinating aspect of it all is that rather than chill or try to apologize or something the trannies just keep on doubling down and turning more and more against them every day, its accelerated quickly and has probably already reached a tipping point.

redditors are weak etc i know but they are so brainwashed by that site that as a group they genuinely scare me, the hate fury that can be whipped up in those guys is frightening

>I didn't, actually.

Quite clearly did. Still waiting for your argument on the disparity. Feeling stupid yet?

>they can't even produce anywhere near the same amount?

Do you understand the concepts of "storage" and "surplus?"

>Oh, you mean all those air assets Russia keeps wasting on civilian infrastructure?

Nope. You keep trying to drag this conversation into the mud because you're garbage at debating and your points are indefensible, so let me be clear: Russia has the air advantage over Ukraine. No amount of pilpul and deflection changes that.

>Probably the same thing that happened to all of Russia's air power

Russia's government got into public disputes with the producers of its military aircraft? Kek, your tactics in this debate are pretty shit.

>Can you do anything other than act like an NPC?

Are you upset that NATO shot your "muh civilian infrastructure" argument in the foot decades ago?

>Okay, I guess you just don't have any idea what a human wave attack is if you just think it means "heavy casualties"

Hahaha, this was really said without irony.

>Again, I know you're retarded but "suffered extreme vehicle losses" does also not mean "human wave" attack.

I don't even know what to say to this. I'm screencapping, though.

>Wagner probably suffered 40k casualties from a pool of about 50k prisoners.

I'm sure you have some hard-hitting evidence to back this whopper up. If true, though, then what chads. 80% loss ratio and they still took Berkivka in about 36 hours.

>I literally stated that they were going to up production to meet Ukraine's needs.

You said that in response to me pointing out the MSM articles talking about NATO shortages. NATO trying to remedy those shortages with "plans" does not change the existence of said shortages. Quite the oppose, really.

>No, the last news was the Bradleys being enroute to Ukraine.

So then even that source doesn't place them in Ukraine right now, and none of that is relevant to the original point that the artillery and air disparity haven't changed over the last five months.

>Except they were correct in Russia invading

A random /pol/ack could've told you that. I still laugh every time I see "Russia didn't announce its invasion ahead of time" on lists of alleged Russian lies.

>Russia's logistical failures

You shouldn't have any need to complain about "civilian infrastructure strikes" if Western intel on Russian logistics was accurate.

>By buying from other countries?

Not necessarily, no. I said what's obvious: you can expend a lot when you start with a surplus, and then you need to moderate to match your production. Thanks for dropping that nonsensical conscription argument.

>Quite clearly did

Nope, I didn't.

>Still waiting for your argument on the disparity.

I already answered you.

>Do you understand the concepts of "storage" and "surplus?"

Do you understand the concept of "Russia is running out of artillery shells so they have to cut back on the amount they use to ration it out so it lasts longer"?

>Russia has the air advantage over Ukraine.

No, they don't.

There's a reason they don't fly any planes and why their missiles get shot down the vast majority of the time, but nice try.

>Russia's government got into public disputes with the producers of its military aircraft?

You're so fucking retarded you can't even read.

>Are you up to speed on NATO shot your "muh civilian infrastructure" argument in the foot decades ago?

Are you so up to speed you can't even read?

No where did I accuse Russia bombing civilian infrastructure, I was pointing out that they were wasting their air power on fucking aspie.

>this was read without irony.

Then the attack on Kyiv was a human wave assault since they took heavy casualties.

>I'm screenshotting though.

>tfw battle of Kursk was a human wave assault because a lot of tanks got destroyed retard

>I'm sure you have some hard-hitting evidence to back this whopper up

You're never going to believe it because it's anti Russia and anything anti Russia is fake in your eyes:

>Head of the independent Russian human rights organization "Rus Sidyashchaya" (Russia Behind Bars) Olga Romanova claimed on January 23 that out of the assessed 50,000 prisoners that Wagner has recruited, only 10,000 are fighting on frontlines in Ukraine due to high casualty, surrender, and desertion rates.

>80% loss ratio and they still took Berkhivka in about 36 hours.

Must be nice to not care about the lives of your men, huh

>You said that in response to me pointing out the MSM articles talking about NATO shortages

Yes, because you WERE actually conveniently leaving that part out.

There's extensive Nazi Larping in Russia, it's a thing in both countries. The difference would be that idolizing Bandera makes sense, as he thought against Russian invaders, while Russian Neo-Nazis seem to just idolize German Nazis, ergo the people who killed scores of Russians.

Now, you might say, "Killing Russians? Uh, based?" but from a Russian perspective it's not supposed to be, that's just cucked.

No, you /chug/gers were all laughing at people saying they were going to do it.

>if Western intel on Russian logistics was accurate.

Again, another NPC response where you literally can't engage with what I wrote.

Russian logistical failures (which have been proven time and time again) have nothing to do with "civilian infrastructure strikes"

>Not necessarily, no.

Right.

So when you can't meet your own expenditure, and you can't produce enough yourselves, that don't go to proving any type of running out of shells, but when the West has to increase production to supply Ukraine, that is a sign of Ukraine running out.

You really are retarded.

>Thanks for doing that nonsensical conscription argument.

I didn't even say that.

No, when you had to conscript 300k people JUST so you can send them to the front as fast as possible to repel an enemy advance, that does go to show that the war isn't going great for you.

National Socialism did not respect private ownership. They left the title to the businesses in the hands of the "owners", but mandated every detail of their operation. How much to produce, where it was sent, how much the companies paid their shareholders, every detail was decided by the party, not the owners. It was socialism just as sure as communism, complete with dictatorship of the proletariat as well.

He started the dirty business of funding those battalions, retard. And he got Israel to directly supply weapons to Azov. He got deep into it and when the media pressed the issue against Israel and glowniggers, glowies ditched him and Ukraine's Ministry of Interior incorporated the militias under the national guard. But yeah, Ukraine is not a country, Ukrainian nationalism is a Lemberg meme forced through operation gladio and the CIA, there's nothing National Socialist about banderites and above all they fight for a Liberal World Order under Western Jews and Liberals. Curiously enough, rightoid cuckservative schizos love to shill for NATO and Jews.

>Nope, I didn't.

Is this your first day? You know I can read what I originally posted and what you then quoted?

>I already answered you.

Nope, but I see we're in the "try to sweep your retarded points under the rug" phase.

>"Russia is running out of artillery shells

Nothing points to them running out. You're taking a simple concept (having a lot of shells from a surplus at the start and burning through that surplus until you reach production parity) and making claims you can't back up.

>No, they don't.

>There's a reason they don't fly any planes

Every war reporting site has way more Russian airstrikes and general air operations than Ukrainian ones. You've been denying basic reality this whole time, but you've reached critical mass with this post.

>and why their missiles get shot down the vast majority of the time

Funny how it only takes 20% of Russia's strikes to plunge Ukraine into emergency blackouts. With that volume of fire, you'd think they'd have run out by now? Or is someone lying?

>You're so fucking retarded you can't even read.

Well, answer the question: did Russia have public disputes similar to the ones between Kiev and Bayraktar's manufacturer?

>No where did I critique Russia bombing civilian infrastructure

Lol, the backtracking. So your argument is instead that NATO was retarded in both Yugoslavia and Iraq by wasting airpower on such trivial targets as electricity production?

>Then the attack on Kyiv was a human wave assault since they took heavy casualties.

Hm, don't see the articles with interviews of Russian soldiers complaining about overwhelming Ukrainian firepower advantages near Kiev.

>battle of Kursk was a human wave assault because a lot of tanks got destroyed

Do you know how many tanks and men the Soviets lost at Kursk? It's not a good sign for Ukraine when you're comparing them to Soviet operations.

File: the typical east slav.jpg (179 KB, 612x816)

East slavs are an inferior subspecies of human, with some controversial scientists suggesting that they should even be considered a part of the negroid species. Much like the negroid, the east slav controls vast swathes of land filled to the brim with valuable resources, but are too incompetent to build anything that comes even close to resembling a functioning civilisation. East slavs are also known for implementing one of the most retarded ideologies known to man: communism. Originally intended as a joke by its creator Karl Marx, communism sounded like a great idea to the dim-witted east slav. After killing tens of millions of their own kind and turning their empire into an impoverished shithole, the east slav finally realized that communism isn't that great. Today the typical east slav spends his day dying from AIDS, alcohol poisoning, suicide, drug overdose or infighting over who is the better east slav (the answer is that they are all equally subhuman, but don't tell them, we want as many of them to die as possible!)

>You're never going to believe it because it's anti Russia and anything anti Russia is fake in your eyes:

No, I won't believe it because there's no reason a prisoner advocacy group would know how many Wagner fighters were at the frontline.

>Yes, because you WERE actually conveniently leaving that part out.

You're spewing nonsense now to sink this debate since you're losing. I originally stated that Western MSM is running articles on NATO running out of ammo as support for my argument about the artillery disparity (which you have failed and will always fail to give an argument for). You responded by denying such a shortage and claiming that they're only talking about making more ammo. I thus posted an example showing that the articles clearly say NATO is running out and that they only mention "plans" to address that.

>It literally has.

And yet you've failed to provide any arguments or evidence after how many posts? Sad!

>No, you /chug/gers were all laughing at people saying they were going to do it.

/chug/ and /uhg/ didn't exist back then.

>have nothing to do with "civilian infrastructure strikes"

>we totally haven't been told that Russia's running out of missiles for the gorillionth time

Kek

>and you can't produce enough yourselves

No evidence of that. We know that they had a massive surplus from the USSR, so it makes sense that they could be more liberal with expenditures at the start.

>I didn't even see that.

So you dropped it just because?

>JUST so you can send them to the front as fast as possible to repel an enemy advance

Ukraine hasn't advanced since the reservists arrived, and Russia's been consistently attacking and taking ground for a while now. Nothing in your sad reality matches ours.

>You know I can read what I originally posted and what you then quoted?
You evidently can't.

>Nope

I did.

I gave you multiple reasons for why there is a difference in artillery.

>Nothing point them running out.

Except then having to ration them and having to import them.

>and making it so you can't back up.

No, you're doing some pretty easy to understand points.

>way more than air strikes and general air operations than Ukrainian ones.

Them shooting missiles at Ukraine from over the sea or from Belarus don't count, you know?

>into emergency blackouts.

Which then they pretty easily repair.

>you'd think they'd have run out by now?

They are close to, of certain types.

>Well, answer the question:

God you are such a fucking NPC.

Go back and read what you wrote you fucking retard.

>Lol, the backtracking

Literally not a backtrack but I wouldn't expect you to understand words that big.

>So your argument is instead that NATO was retarded in both Yugoslavia and Iraq by wasting airpower on such trivial targets as electricity production?

If it had no impact on the war, yes.

What Russia is doing has no impact on the war, except for helping Ukraine get more AA.

So what Russia is doing is fucking retarded.

>don't see the articles with interviews of Russian soldiers complaining about overwhelming Ukrainian firepower advantages near Kiev.

>A former soldier before his imprisonment, he also described catastrophic losses. "Our batch was 130 people, but we also have many amputees, and we probably have 40 people left", he added, saying many different groups of prisoners were added to their unit over time. He said his unit had only 15 survivors and that the 08807 was now called 40321, or "Storm unit." "In short, the meat grinder," he added. He told CNN in the past few days he had been sent back to the frontline, his injuries unhealed.

>No, I won't believe it because there's no reason a prisoner advocacy group would know how many Wagner fighters were at the frontline

I can't believe you would write something that fucking retarded.

>The scheme to send convicts to the war appears to have grown fast, with figures obtained by CNN from Russia's penal system showing a 27,000 drop in the prison population between March and November last year, when the scheme was just three months old.

Do you not even have a single brain cell bouncing around in your thick fucking skull?

>You're spewing nonsense now to sink this debate since you're losing.

Whatever helps you cope.

You were the one who didn't quote that part.

>which you have failed and will always fail to give an argument for

No, I have given you 3 potential reasons for why.

>You responded by denying such a shortage and claiming that they're only talking about making more ammo.

I never denied the claim that the West has had to increase production.

>and that they only mention "plans" to address that.

"only"

They've already increased production in some areas.

>And yet you've failed to provide any arguments or evidence after how many posts?

Are you just utterly clueless?

You do know Ukraine has gotten more, and more advanced, AA capabilities since then, right?

>Kek

Oh, you're so fucking retarded that you can't even understand the concept of time.

>No evidence of that.

Then they wouldn't need to import.

>So you dropped it just because?

No, I just responded to it you fucking moron.

>Ukraine hasn't advanced since the reservists arrived

Yes, human shields are effective, apparently.

But Russia hasn't done anything either with twice the amount of troops in a much more limited area.

>and taking ground for a while now

lol

I was just sitting here drinking champagne and I think about my selfish miserable life and how I have trauma from being assaulted as a child and always getting robbed and mugged in the slums and how I never really had family and still don't so much. Kind of have a relationship with my dad. He kinda hates me too though. How actually it's kind of a blessing just that I'm living in the west and can listen to music and drink this champagne with electricity lights on. I was feeling really suicidal actually like holy shit suicidal for couple days and really even though I think I'm miserable in my head I still believe in Jesus after the bullshit I've seen and how I read scripture or heard it. Then there's these people and disasters all over the USA and the world, just recently the bio-attack fucking up Ohio and the displacing people in our country, and also this war in Ukraine been on a year now the tragedy and loss of life and wellness. I'm still here and I'm actually strong as fuck some ways even if I'm constantly thinking about weakness and negative thoughts. I could actually be the crazy agent of change and betterment in this cold savage world I could actually make a massive difference for USA and the world actually. There is suffering everywhere on all sides yet to move out into it unafraid and actually be a hero and someday heal
