Camouflaged by “Covid-19,” an undeclared global class war was initiated in 2020, aimed at replacing liberal democracy with technocracy, a novel, biodigital form of totalitarianism.

The opening campaign involved the largest psychological operation in history, intended to demoralise, disorientate and debilitate the public. David A. Hughes book “Covid-19,” Psychological Operations, and the War for Technocracy Volume 1 deals with the application of shock and stress, trauma-based mind control, the use of fear and threat, cognitive attack, weaponised deception and techniques for turning society against itself.

David A. Hughes is a senior lecturer in International Relations at the School of Social and Political Sciences, University of Lincoln, UK. In his book published in May 2024, he exposes the transnational psychological warfare operation camouflaged by “Covid-19,” identifies World War III seeking to replace liberal democracy with totalitarian technocracy and explores the potential for evil of weaponized neurotechnology.

Abstract: “Covid-19,” Psychological Operations, and the War for Technocracy Volume 1

The book 'Covid-19, Psychological Operations, and the War for Technocracy: Volume 1' is a thought-provoking examination of the covid-19 pandemic and its implications on society. The author presents a compelling case that the pandemic is not just a health crisis, but a catalyst for a broader agenda to establish a technocratic system of governance.

The book begins by exploring the concept of psychological operations ("PsyOps") and how they have been used throughout history to influence public opinion and shape behaviour. The author argues that the covid-19 pandemic has been exploited as a PsyOp to create a sense of fear and uncertainty, which has been leveraged to justify unprecedented restrictions on individual freedoms and the erosion of civil liberties.

Hughes contends that the pandemic has been used to accelerate the transition to a technocratic system, characterised by the increasing reliance on technology and data to monitor and control populations. This system is driven by a small elite who seek to impose their vision of a "new world order" on humanity.

The book highlights several key takeaways, including:

1. The manipulation of data and statistics to create a narrative of fear and panic, which has been used to justify draconian measures such as lockdowns, mask mandates and vaccination programmes.
2. The role of the media in perpetuating the narrative and suppressing dissenting voices, creating an atmosphere of censorship and intimidation.
3. The erosion of civil liberties, including the suspension of habeas corpus, the imposition of curfews and the use of surveillance technology to monitor citizens.
4. The rise of the biosecurity state, which prioritises the protection of the state over the well-being of people, and seeks to create a culture of obedience and compliance.
5. The agenda to impose a digital identity on citizens, which would enable the state to track and control every aspect of their lives.
6. The role of central banks and the financial system in facilitating the transition to a technocratic system, through the creation of digital currencies and the manipulation of the economy.

The book also explores the concept of "problem-reaction-solution," where a crisis is created or exacerbated, and then used to justify the implementation of a pre-planned solution that advances the technocratic agenda.

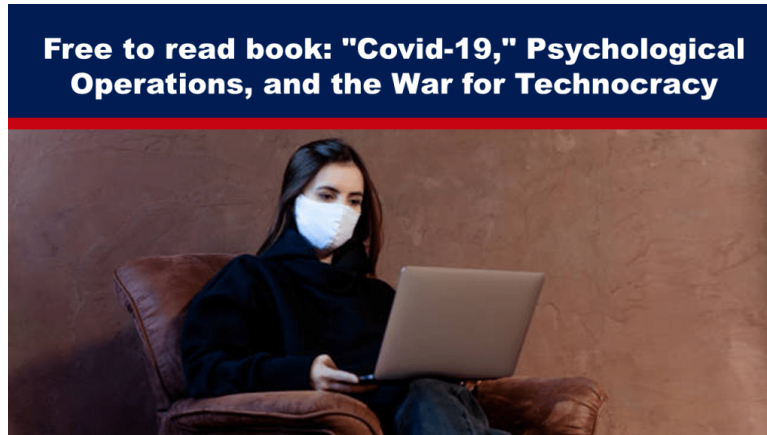

Hughes argues that the covid-19 pandemic is a classic example of this strategy, where the crisis has been used to justify the implementation of measures such as contact tracing, vaccination passports and digital identity systems.

The book concludes by emphasising the need for people to be aware of the technocratic agenda and to take action to resist its implementation. The author argues that the only way to prevent the establishment of a technocratic system is through education, awareness and collective action.

Overall, "Covid-19," Psychological Operations, and the War for Technocracy: Volume 1 is a thought-provoking and well-researched book that provides a compelling analysis of the covid-19 pandemic and its implications for society. The book's key takeaways offer a sobering warning about the dangers of the technocratic agenda and the need for people to take action to protect their freedoms and autonomy.
